

In the current context of severe budget cuts jeopardizing donor aid contributions, a new report from

Eurodad

and commissioned by

CONCORD's Aidwatch

examines all different sources of development finance and their characteristics, while analysing their impact on poverty and sustainable development. The report divides sources into the following six categories: domestic sources, private capital flows, ODA and philanthropy, external government borrowing and lending, illicit capital flight, and new “innovative” financial resources.