

DFI moderated a panel on lessons from the experience of a health sector PPP in Lesotho, based on a study from Oxfam. Experts from Oxfam, the Lesotho Consumer Protection Association and IFC exchanged views, agreeing that PPPs are a high cost and high risk option for financing, best used in conditions where private sector expertise is worth the extra cost, and that it would be desirable to review the Lesotho contract. To read the Oxfam report, click here .