

Fair and effective public services are a strong weapon in the fight against economic inequality. This Africa-focused briefing examines the extent to which African countries are meeting the spending targets that governments in the region have set for themselves at regional ministerial meetings. It shows that most African governments are falling far short of their pledges on agriculture, health, education and social protection.