

The key modalities for developing in-country capacity to conduct all aspects of debt and aid management are:

- Needs assessment missions to identify national capacity needs and to propose ways of meetings them,
- National training events , which provide intensive hand-on training for a team of national officials in the specific tasks and analyses required to design and implement a national debt or aid strategy
- Institutional missions to work with national officials on how to strengthen the legal and institutional frameworks for conducting all aspects of debt and aid management
- Follow-up or technical missions to provide technical support in a specific area of debt management, including for example assistance with debt negotiations,
- Sensitisation or dissemination event to work with national officials to prepare for a seminar or one-day workshop to sensitise senior policymakers, public, CSOs or other key groups to the importance and relevance of government's debt and/or aid policy
- Intensive assistance and ad hoc support to provide tailored support to meet country specific capacity needs, which can be a one-off technical support mission or a full programme of support including workshops and missions.
